Introduction:

As part of the 7-day residential NSS Special Camp conducted in Wadholi village, the NSS Unit organized a series of street plays on the 5th of March 2023. These street plays served as powerful tools for raising awareness on critical social issues, including voter awareness, gender equality, and the importance of girl child education.

The street plays were designed to convey important social messages to the community through engaging and impactful performances. The choice of topics, including voter awareness, gender equality, and girl child education, reflects the commitment of the NSS Unit to address key social issues.

Execution:

The street plays were performed at various locations within the village, allowing them to reach a wider audience. Two distinct plays were organized, each addressing different awareness themes.

Voter Awareness:

This play highlighted the significance of active and informed participation in the democratic process. It conveyed the importance of voting, informed decision-making, and the role citizens play in shaping the future of their community and nation. The performance aimed to motivate villagers to exercise their voting rights and be responsible citizens.

Gender Equality and Girl Child Education:

The second play revolved around gender equality and the crucial need to educate and empower girls. It underscored the importance of providing equal opportunities for girls and eradicating gender-based discrimination. The play encouraged the community to support girl child education and promote gender equality.

Achievements:

The street plays achieved several key outcomes:

Awareness: The plays effectively conveyed the intended messages on voter awareness, gender equality, and girl child education. They raised awareness and prompted discussions within the community.

Engagement: The use of street plays as a medium engaged the audience actively and emotionally, making the messages more relatable and memorable.

Community Impact: The impact of the street plays extended beyond the event. They inspired individuals to consider their roles in promoting positive social change, fostering an environment of collective responsibility within the community.

Conclusion:

The NSS Unit of KCT's Late G. N. Sapkal College of Engineering used street plays as a creative and impactful means to address critical issues during the 7-day residential NSS Special Camp. The initiative successfully raised awareness and encouraged dialogue on voter participation, gender equality, and girl child education.
